the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are poor has increased. The number of people living on less than $1 a day has increased from 1.2 billion in 1981 to 1.5 billion in 1998.

There are a number of reasons for this. One is that the world's population has increased. The number of people in the world has increased from 5 billion in 1981 to 6 billion in 1998. This means that there are more people who need to be fed and clothed and housed.

Another reason is that the world's economy has not grown fast enough. The world's economy has grown at an average rate of 2.5% per year since 1981. This means that the world's economy has not grown fast enough to create enough jobs for all the people who need them.

A third reason is that the world's resources are being used up. The world's resources are being used up at an ever-increasing rate. This means that there are fewer resources available for people to use.

There are a number of things that we can do to help reduce poverty. One is to help the world's economy grow faster. This can be done by investing in infrastructure, such as roads and bridges, and by providing technical assistance to developing countries.

Another thing we can do is to help the world's resources last longer. This can be done by conserving resources and by using them more efficiently.

Finally, we can help people who are poor by providing them with food, clothing, and shelter. This can be done by donating money and supplies to organizations that help the poor.

There are many things that we can do to help reduce poverty. It is up to us to decide what we want to do and to do it.
